Daily Nevada State Journal.

C. C. POWNING, Editor and Proprietor.

THE STATE OF NEVADA.

Virginia Enterprise: "The incoming Legislature will be brought face to face with the problem of placing the State, by the enactment of wholesome laws, upon a square financial basis. At no time in the history of Nevada did more difficult questions and graver duties rest upon its legislative branch of the Government."

But we deserve ourselves grievously if we think that the mere enactment of laws will accomplish everything needed to build up a State—to make Nevada a wealthy and prosperous commonwealth. The help of patriotic citizens of the State—of men who have battled many years in Nevada, and who intend to die and be buried here—is probably of greater importance than legislative action, so far as the welfare and prosperity of the people is concerned.

The Legislature, true, can pass laws to permit of an economical administration of State and county governments, in order that the excessive rate of taxation which prevails in Nevada may be materially reduced, and it may pass laws to materially assist in the development of the resources of the State in order that immigration may be stimulated; but beyond this every other important matter lies in our own hands and beyond the pale of legislative influence.

So long as we have us over tapestry in his chambering, society is satisfied to be bolted over a corduroy road in his literature. The whole assumption of Mr. McAllister is untenably preposterous. He poses as an arbiter of the elegances, the Bayard of good breeding and the prototype of polite accomplishments, and then proposes to jolt the patience out of us because he has not acquired the very first requisite of good breeding and polite society, which is the art of speaking and writing the English language correctly.

The ability to use one's verbs with reference to their nominative appears to be a very small affair in the life of a man who has arrived at that condition of exclusiveness by not eating with his knife. Still, this misfortune might be condoned in a man who chiefly desired to be known as a public valet, if he had not unmistakably shown that the intelligence of utterance is associated with, and presumably is, the indirect outcome of, a tepid funkiness of character.

Autobiographically Mr. McAllister's book extends this peculiarity on every page. "How I got in. How I fastened on. What I saw after I got in. How I availed myself of the thing I got into to become unique," are virtually the sub-divisions of his narrative.

He confesses fashionable life with good society, and this is "infinitely worse than putting rum into sorbet. However, the defense of fashionable life is worth listening to."

"The mistake made by the world at large," he says, "is that fashionable people are selfish, frivolous and indifferent to the welfare of their fellow creatures. This is a great mistake, and arises from a want of knowledge on the part of the world at large of the true state of affairs."

True state of affairs: in fra. From all of which bewildering nonsense I conclude that the sorbet has got into the rum.

There is on the author's part an intense and honest conviction that whatever he does will be received by the world with breathless admiration when he tells it, and the headings of some of his chapters carry this conviction to the extreme death of an egotistic hallucination. "The Way I Got Up Frontier," "How I Learned to Give Dinners," "I Spent an Entire Day in Getting My Dress Coat," "I am Dubbed the Autocrat of Drawing Rooms," are examples of a self-importance to which wearisome pages are devoted.

It is not apparent that he knows anything about the elemental factors in this great, seething and vital American life, with its pressing social issues and its dire challenges of progress.

But he knows how to cook a ham.

He cannot see that in our life society is a flux and not a fixity. That the pulsant energies of character are more operative than the predetermined flats of a coterie, and that talent, energy, sagacity, public spirit, enterprise, probity and skill are continually flowing over from one condition to another and cannot be held in any arbitrary social limitations set down in a lady's chamber.

But he can see and he announces with a butler's flourish that one soup is sufficient for a dinner and that turkeys must have black feathers.

A pleasing wonderment, pathetic and poignant, escapes him, that talent, energy, sagacity, probity and genius do not awaken to the importance of what he calls social recognition and desirability of having credentials from some kind of court of appraisalment which is proudly above the possession of any of these qualities.

One sees here the self-constituted head usher of exclusiveness, who has formulated the unknown for the sake of being his high priest and regulating its high jinks.

What, therefore, society revered as a bean ideal suddenly becomes a Bean Brummel.

Some peals of decorous laughter must at this time be heard in the drawing-rooms of those stalwart Americans who owe nothing to society but to whom society owes everything.

They may not be able to repeat the Queen's bill of fare from memory, but they have built commonwealths and set the refined American home upon the rock of virtue. Their dames are not market women whatever their mothers may have been, and their lives do not revolve about Strauss' orchestra. Back of elegance is ability and ahead of all are a public spirit

McALLISTER'S BOOK.

Nym Crinkle Criticizes the Leader of New York's Society.

New York is nearer to Europe by at least a thousand miles than Chicago.

It is nearer than the rest of America by a thousand snobberies.

Now that he has got himself into a book Mr. McAllister invites consideration not alone from society, but from intelligence.

Having read it I am bound in all sincerity to add that, with the single exception of the elite directory, I never encountered anything so exasperatingly insane as polite literature, and so iniquitously misleading as a guide-book.

The very first thing that meets the eye is this disclaimer of the author's:

"One who reads this book through will have as rough a mental journey as his physical nature would undergo in riding over a corduroy road in an old-fashioned stage-coach. It makes no pretension to either scholarship or elegant diction."

From this I understand that good society in New York is entirely indifferent to a man's ability to express himself correctly.

It is quite content if he dresses himself and his salad correctly.

So long as he chatters us over tapestry in his chambering, society is satisfied to be bolted over a corduroy road in his literature.

The whole assumption of Mr. McAllister is untenably preposterous. He poses as an arbiter of the elegances, the Bayard of good breeding and the prototype of polite accomplishments, and then proposes to jolt the patience out of us because he has not acquired the very first requisite of good breeding and polite society, which is the art of speaking and writing the English language correctly.

Their dames are not market women whatever their mothers may have been, and their lives do not revolve about Strauss' orchestra. Back of elegance is ability and ahead of all are a public spirit and an avowed relationship to all that is sterling and strenuous in our composite life.

Meanwhile, that life itself goes on with its grinding wheels. The tumult of deeds is not sufficient to drown the sad Kyrie Eleison of the people. The wall of labor and the brawl of iniquity come mingled to our ears. Stupendous issues weigh like an atmosphere heavy with storm.

It is the hour of events. Man is crowding up his aggregate and he wears a countenance that is both melancholy and determined for he is hungry.

It is not possible by any conventional fiction to remove ourselves safely from this storm of endeavor. Whether we will or not we must walk with civilization. Some of us are anxious, some of us are hopeful.

But it is permitted us as we sweep along in the chill eventide of a day that is fled, to look through the windows into the lighted parlors of the past and see in passing the unrelayed, the irresponsible and the insane.

It is flavoring the sorbet with bitter almonds.

A STRANGE DUEL.

How a Gambler and a Marshal Fought to the Death.

From the Anaconda Standard.

"Do you see that tall man standing there," asked the Colonel. "Notice how he brushes his hair forward on the sides, as some Englishmen do. One of these looks hides a scar which bears eloquent testimony as to a narrow escape from death."

"Thirty years ago he was a Deputy Marshal in Nevada. He started out one day to arrest a notorious gambler, who had killed a man over a game of cards. The gambler knew that the Marshal was seeking him, but, with a cool effrontery, walked about the street all day. Will—that is the Deputy Marshal—heard that the man he wanted was in a well-known bar-room. He set out for the place and carelessly walked boldly into the room. He had not crossed the threshold when he found himself looking into the barrel of a six-shooter.

"'Com, Ha dy,' he said, coolly, 'this won't do. I've come to get you, and I want you.'"

"'S-e here, John,' said the gambler, 'I don't want to kill you, but I won't let any man arrest me. Go away and let me alone.'"

"'No; I want you,' said the Marshal, quietly. 'Put down the six-shooter and come with me.'"

"'I'll see you shot first,' said Hardy.

"'I can't help that,' said the other. 'I must have you. Now you have the drop on me, but you must come with me or I'll kill you in cold blood.'"

"'I don't want to kill you,' said Hardy. 'Then put down your gun.'"

"'John, I won't be arrested. Don't touch me. I don't want to shoot a man without cause.'"

"'I've got to do it, Hardy.'"

"'See here,' said the gambler, turning white, 'if you move a foot I will kill you. But I hate to be a coward. That was fair and square last night. We both pulled to gether.'"

"The Marshal shook his head. 'I'll do one thing, John,' Hardy went on. 'I'll back up to the wall. You'll back up to the other. I'll draw my revolver to my hip and you can draw yours. Then it's the best man.'"

"The Marshal moved backward to the wall and Hardy did the same. Then the Marshal drew his revolver and held it at his side, muzzle down. All this time Hardy kept his weapon leveled at the Marshal. Slowly, his arm sank until his weapon touched the seam of his trousers. Both men were calm and immovable, the Marshal determined-looking, the gambler still pale.

"'Now, John,' said Hardy. Instantly both weapons went up. It was all over so quickly that both men went on the floor together. But Hardy had fired too soon, his ball went up at an upward angle and grazed the Marshal's temple. But the Marshal had sent his bullet straight into Hardy's heart and there was no need to arrest the gambler."

In Memoriam.

HALL OF TRUCKER LODGE, No. 14, I. O. O. F.

RENO, Nov., November 12, 1890.

To the Officers and Members of Truckers Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F.:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Supreme Ruler of the Universe to take from our midst our beloved Brother, Peter Martinovich; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Peter Martinovich, the Lodge has lost an exemplary member, and the community an upright and honorable citizen.

Resolved, That while we mourn the loss of a dear Brother, we feel that he has gone to a better world, free from all cares and humanity is subject to.

Resolved, That the Charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the daily papers, and a copy thereof be transmitted, under seal of the Lodge, to the relatives of our deceased Brother.

Respectfully submitted, in F. L. and T. N. C. HAMMERSMITH, HENRY RUBE, JOHN BOWMAN, Committee.

250 Beautiful Lots For Sale!

A RARE CHANCE FOR AN INVESTMENT AND A HOME

THE MOST LOVELY PORTION OF RENO.

Facing the Truckee—The Aristocratic Avenue Riverside Driveway—Splendid Sewerage—Healthy Location and Safe From Fire.

The proprietor is now ready to receive proposals for lots in Powning's Addition. The map gives a good idea of the tract, which is situated between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Truckee River, and commences on the west at a point three blocks distant from Virginia Street, making it the most central and convenient of any portion of the rapidly growing town of Reno. Unlike any other part of the town this Addition faces the beautiful Truckee River and Riverside Avenue is certain to become the fashionable driveway of the country. The streets are 80 feet wide, while Riverside and Keystone Avenues are intended to be 100 feet in width. All alleys are 20 feet wide. The soil is a rich gravelly loam, and susceptible of the highest state of cultivation. Being situated as it is it is more safe from fire than any other section. The regular lots are 50x140 feet. The sewerage is perfect.

Before Buying Elsewhere Parties will do Well to Look at These Lots.

INSURANCE.

THE

Insurance Company.

Assets, $12,000,000.

The history of the past has proven beyond a question that an endowment policy in a life insurance company is a much

BETTER INVESTMENT

Than a savings bank; FIRST, because it is very much safer—as the law of the State of New York requires every life insurance company to keep a

Reserve in First-Class Securities

Equal to its liabilities, dollar for dollar; SECOND, in case of death while making these small deposits, the life insurance company will pay, just when most needed by the family, the

Full Amount

Of the sum insured, amounting to 10, 20, or even 30 times as much as has been deposited; or on the

Return Premium

Plan of the MANHATTAN, they would do even more than this, for they would at death pay the face of the policy and in addition all the deposits (premiums) paid, while the savings bank would only return the amounts actually deposited with interest. Who would not purchase a valuable piece of property—a farm for example—worth $10,000, if he could have twenty years to pay for it, in small sums of $300 per annum with interest on deferred payments and without any tax on it? The $300 per year being only 3 per cent of the $10,000—a sum not much greater than that paid annually for taxes on property in hand, of the same cost, and especially if he could have the further conditions specially stated in the contract, that if he dies while making these payments—even after one only has been made—

No Further Payments Shall be Required

And the full title in fee simple to the entire farm shall at once be given to his family; and 2d, that if at any time after the three years during the twenty years he shall be unable to continue the payments and from sickness or any misfortune, that then he could discontinue any further payments and have in fee simple such portions of the farm as he has paid for; thus, if one-fourth of payments had been made, he would own one separate fourth of the farm, etc., and at the same time the farm be entirely free from all claims of creditors, under all circumstances, not even to be reached by writ of execution or attachment issued by any court, while if living to the end of the twenty years and the annual payments have been made, the

Entire Property in Fee Simple

Is secured.

Now the MANHATTAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY offers all this and more, for instead of offering LAND on these terms, which is often eaten up by legal expenses and fees in case of the death of the purchaser, or swallowed up by a mortgage given to secure deferred payments, thus leaving the whole amount paid in and leaving the family destitute, or dependent, it offers a

of First-Class Securities.

Agreeing to pay MONEY on the same terms and conditions as above—the cost per year varying at different ages, but otherwise substantially the same terms as above stated, while the sum to be paid at the end of twenty years will be increased by dividends and compounded interest for the full term, thus making the investment a very PROFITABLE and ADVANTAGEOUS one.

Inquiries concerning the bonds this company will receive prompt reply if addressed to
